WHISKED FROM POLAND

L.A. Student Safe, Dad Told

The move of Culver City exchange student Roger Pulvers, 22, from a university in Krakow, Poland, to London, was described last night as "a precautionary measure" by the UCLA alumnus' father, Louis Pulvers.

Young Pulvers was whisked out of Poland Monday for his own protection after it was revealed the National Student Association sponsoring his studies there has been receiving some of its funds from the Central Intelligence Agency.

The father, of 5215 S. Sepulveda Blvd., Culver City, said:

a telephone call yesterday afternoon from Washington in which he was assured his son was safe and healthy. While not identifying the caller, the father explained the source said Roger would remain in Europe to study.

Pulvers, an insurance agent, said his son phoned him Monday evening from London.

Roger expects to return home before September to continue working toward a doctor of philosophy degree at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Withdrawal by UCLA of any affiliation with the CIA was disclosed yesterday.
